

Captain Book Sets Sail...But Will Return!

Bill Landau Retires as Library Manager

After almost ten years on the job, Bill Landau is retiring from the Tillamook County Library as Library Manager. Bill has been responsible for supervising the bookmobile, the courier service, and the branch libraries in Manzanita, Rockaway, Garibaldi, Bay City, and Pacific City.

In addition to those duties, Bill has organized the summer parade entries for the library, directed the book cart drill team, and dressed up as Captain Book for various events. He's also the guy behind the ukulele classes.

No need to worry though as Bill and his wife Peggy are staying in the area and will continue to work part time for the library. His library column in the Headlight Herald will continue! Who knows, maybe Captain Book will even be making some appearances in the future!

The picture to the left features a custom bobble head in the likeness of Captain Book that was created as a retirement gift for Bill.

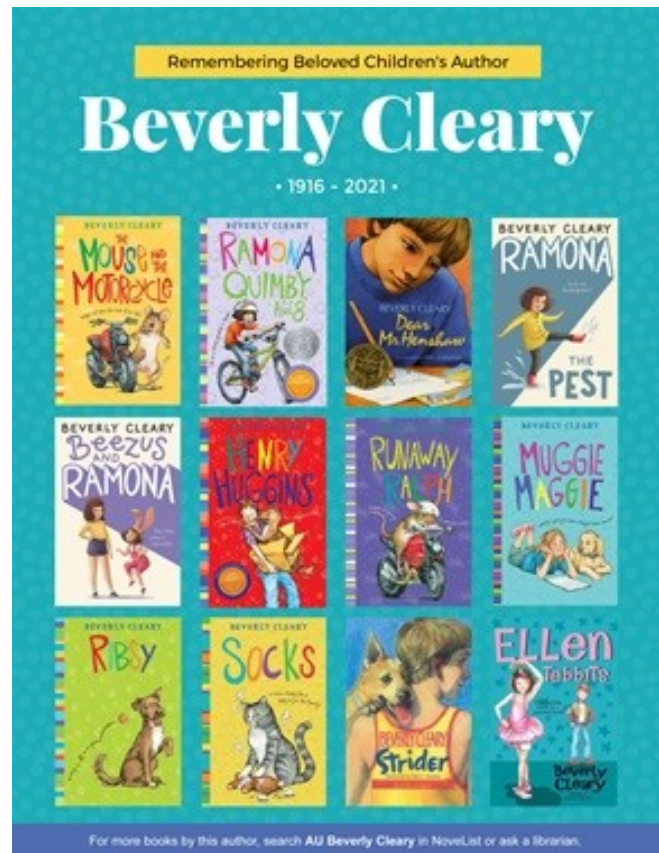

Remembering Beverly Cleary

Rest In Peace, Beverly

Some of the most iconic and memorable children's books were written by Oregon author, Beverly Cleary. She passed away last week at age 104 but left behind a legacy that will not soon be forgotten.

What made her books so special is they were lively, humorous, and contained characters that children could relate to. Cleary managed to create hilarious drama using believable, everyday problems and injustices. Over the decades, kids could not get enough of the adventures of Ramona, Beezus and Henry Huggins. To date, Cleary's books have sold over 85 million copies.
